PUZZLE TWO: REVISED EDITIONS [answer]

That's it—the librarians must be altering history using time travel! Changing—or should I say demolishing—classic books to better attract the youths of today! This madness must be stopped.

If you're with me, return to page 1.

If not, go to page 29.

PUZZLE TEN: BINGBONG [answer]

Are they trying to say—does that mean they weren't responsible after all? The fire was in fact the result of spontaneous combustion?

That's... that's preposterous! Only a truly devastating tear in spacetime could cause such a reaction. You'd need a dozen sevades' worth of causality paradoxes. And nothing has that kind of power other than—

Oh, right. I have that kind of power. But that's—that would mean that we're responsible for this mess! And that's not... there must be another explanation. Turn to page 60 so we can sort this out.

PUZZLE NINE: BOOK BURNING [answer]

The crisis has been averted! Now all that remains is to track down the librarians responsible for this heinous crime and bring them to justice. Turn to page 41.

Page 142

(upon arrival, directed to page 17 and given a transparency)

Print one copy for each team of the following page on a transparency. It will be used for the meta puzzle.

You know, I didn't exactly think much of you all when you first opened me up, but you've really proven me wrong.

It's time for one more trip, and this time we'll be traversing all of our past journeys together. Once everything is in order, we'll need to get rid of any bit of time, small or large, that may have been disturbed in the course of our travels.

Print one, double-sided copy for each team of the following two pages. It will be inserted into each team's book after puzzle 5.

Apologies for sprouting an extra leaf out of nowhere, but I didn't know how else to get your attention! There's been a slight change of plans and I need you to turn to page 98.

Don't worry—it's definitely not a trap. The fact that this page appeared out of nowhere should not concern you at all, in fact.

Go ahead to the next page.

As in the page that is now the next page to this page, which also happens have been the “next page” for that last page from which you went to the page after—

You know what, just go to page 25.
